Taylor admits bouncing checks

BY JANET MCQUEEN

Fifth District Rep. Gene Taylor admitted to supporters Friday night his name is among current and former congressmen who bounced checks in the House bank.

A crowd of some 1,000 gathered at a Biloxi hotel to hear Taylor's campaign kickoff speech. After opening remarks, those present were the first to hear the congressman's admission of involvement in the Ethics Committee investigation.

According to press secretary Shawn Bullard, Taylor had remained "optimistic" his name would not be among offenders until he was informed Thursday he was on the list.

Taylor blamed the House bank for sloppy bookkeeping, and declined to say how much money or how many checks were overdrawn.

"Our statements never showed a negative balance," said Bullard, who allowed the bank failed to deposit paychecks immediately.

"I am positive the overdrafts will not exceed the amount Gene has given in congressional scholarships," said Bullard, referring to Taylor's promise to dedicate his pay raises to a scholarship fund for South Mississippi students.

Taylor joins 2nd District Rep. Mike Espy and 4th District Rep. Mike Parker, who have previously admitted to bouncing checks.

Lawsuit filed in '86 deaths of 2 children

BY TRACI BONNEY

Theresa Skinner, formerly of Hancock County, has filed a lawsuit against two state agencies in connection with the 1986 deaths of two sons.

She filed suit Thursday in Hinds County Circuit Court against the state Department of Human Services and the state Board of Health, claiming their negligence caused her sons' deaths when the Waveland foster home where they were living burned.

Her sons, Terrance Skinner, then 4, and Jonathan Skinner, 3, were two of six foster children who died in a fire that destroyed the home of Larry and Sandy Giveans on March 29, 1986.

Mr. and Mrs. Giveans, their son Robbie and a 9-month-old foster child, Christina Capone, escaped the fire.

Skinner's attorney, Blewett Thomas of Gulfport, said the state failed to adequately inspect the housing.

"I think this is just demonstrative of situations where the Welfare Department and Department of Human Services will take a child and put him in a home without undertaking to make certain the home is suitable for housing foster children.

"There are indications of several things that, if the state had undertaken to inspect the house, may have prevented what happened, and we might not be where we are today with the lawsuit.

A ray of hope

Gulf Coast Women's Crisis Center offers assistance and understanding

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

It is three o'clock in the morning and it is cold and rainy outside.

Along a back road a young woman walks hunched against sheets of rain, clutching a child in her arms.

She reaches a convenience store where the shelter of the overhang temporarily protects the two of them from the elements while she fumbles for a coin to use the public phone.

Looking up to dial the numbers her swollen face is exposed, one eye practically shut from sustaining repeated blows.

The call goes through. A woman answers and words too often repeated are heard, "Help me."

Though this scenario is fictional, the facts are that every 15 seconds, a woman is battered in the United States, and every seven minutes, a woman is raped.

The Gulf Coast Women's Crisis Center is the oldest and largest local center assisting women today.

It is here that women with little hope and a need to change their lives from abusive to productive, come for help.

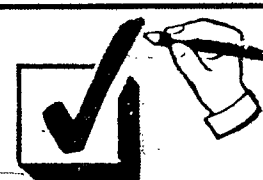

Marsha Theriot, Hancock crisis line volunteer reported, "We are a support group."

VOTE TUESDAY!

Polls are open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. Tuesday for the Fifth Congressional District Republican runoff election between candidates Paul Harvey and Billy Hewes.

Kellar supports return to beat system

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

District 2 Supervisor Alton "Dolph" Kellar predicts the people of Hancock County will petition for a vote on the return to the beat system in November. "The petition will probably be presented to the board of supervisors late September or early October," Kellar stated.

He said since Wednesday's Senate approval to allow voters the opportunity to petition for a vote to return to beats, he has received calls from many constituents ready to begin circulating a petition.

The present unit system of county government is practiced in 46 of Mississippi's 82 counties. It requires that supervisors act as policy makers, and a paid road manager be responsible for day-to-day road operations through a centralized purchasing office. All purchases must be accompanied by a purchase order.

The beat system places supervisors in charge of their own districts and provides them the freedom to manage their own road and bridge funds, equipment, employees and work priorities. Purchasing practices required only those items exceeding $500 be accompanied by a purchase order.

In 1988, Hancock County voted to use the unit system. Leading the way for the change were "Operation Pretense" investigations, which exposed widespread abuse of power by supervisors across the state. Four out of five Hancock County supervisors were removed from office as a result of Operation Pretense charges.

Today the beat system still retains the stigma of potential for abuse. Kellar, having served under both systems, objected to the idea that the beat system is more prone to abuse than any other system. He points out that Hancock County was utilizing sufficient centralized purchasing practices prior to the system change.

He cited the need for the county to hire an addition employee under the new purchasing practices, adding, in his opinion, little has changed in the purchase of items under the minimum state bid requirements.

Kellar said the push for change to the unit system was a direct result of years of advocacy by the Mississippi Economic Council.

"The whole county voted to go to the unit system," he explained, "because they were told it was going to save money. It has not."

"The change to the unit system has been a power grab which has destroyed the last grassroots system in Mississippi. Supervisors are no longer close to the people. The way the system works now, they shouldn't even call us supervisors."

Brothers-in-law collide

No injuries were reported in this fender-bender in which brothers-in-law Arlin Hurt, left, and Jonathan Vittur, both of Bay St. Louis, collided Friday afternoon on Central Avenue, corner of Seventh Street in Shoreline Park. Hurt's 1978 Ford pickup truck was struck from the rear by Vittur's 1991 Sentra. No citations were issued according to Hancock County Sheriff's Deputy George Burleson. (Photo by T. H. (Doc) Toups)

Lawsuit

"For instance, there are indications that some wiring was done in the previous year or so that may not have been adequate. Also, our information is that some doors inside were nailed shut and barricaded, and we believe those doors may have trapped the children in the house when the fire started."

Thomas said attempts at reconciliation with the state agencies have gone nowhere.

He is demanding a jury trial and asking the jury to set damages if it finds in Skinner's favor. He explained the suit was filed six years after the fire because the mother had lived out of state.

Her sons were living at the Giveans home at the time of the fire while Skinner and her husband were going through a separation, Thomas said.

Board of Health and Human Services spokesmen have declined to comment on the lawsuit.

Watchful eyes

Three new Neighborhood Watch groups formed in Bay

BY T. H. (DOC) TOUPS
Bay St. Louis became a less friendly place—for criminals—last week when Bay St. Louis Police Department recognized three new Neighborhood Watch groups.

Representatives of the groups participated in three hours of classroom instruction, including slide and video presentations, according to Lt. Don Oco and Patrolman Jim Clark of the Bay St. Louis Police Department.

Oco said the police department is currently training approximately 10 Neighborhood Watch groups per year.

In addition to learning methods of detecting and reporting suspicious or criminal activity, participants in the courses arrange for members of the groups to have their property security surveyed.

Police officers inspect the residences and issue written reports suggesting changes which can make the location a less desirable criminal target.

The Bay St. Louis Police

Department is currently making this service available to all Hancock County residents, according to Oco. The training is provided on a time-available basis and advanced scheduling is recommended.

Anyone interested in establishing a new Neighborhood Watch group, or who would like to have their property security surveyed is invited to contact crime prevention officers Oco or Clark at the police department at 467-9221.

Kellar

Kellar attributes his recent election to the board as a direct result of his support of a return to the beat system.

A criticism of the unit system is the cost of reorganization. Many of the budget increases for FY 1989-90 were blamed on programs mandated but not funded by the state.

District 1 supervisor Robert "Pete" Peterson and newly elected District 3 supervisor Howard Lizana have expressed mixed feelings concerning the present unit system. Where both have pointed out their preference for centralized purchasing methods, they also express a desire for increased authority over the roads within their individual districts.

District 4 supervisor Wilmer Seymour prefers the unit system. "In particular, I like the checks and balances of the current centralized purchasing practices."

Seymour added he felt the unit system could profit, should supervisors be permitted a closer working relationship with road crews. "But, all and all, I'm a unit man. I believe it to be the better system."

District 5 supervisor Mike Ladner has commented because of the size increase of the county, the unit system should prove preferable, given time.

He added, "Hancock County is one of the fastest growing counties in Mississippi; and if we had to get out early in the morning and handle a crew, we would never have time to handle other county business."

Senator Vic Frankiewicz did not vote Wednesday on the proposal. He said, "I have serious misgivings about the bill, mainly because it is not giving the people the choice to make other decisions."

"The supervisor's association supports the bill, wanting to give the people the right to vote on this, but keeping the people from voting on any other changes in government."

"I honestly find it hypocritical."

MTI wins new Army contract

Mason Technologies Inc., the company that has been mothballing the Mississippi Army Ammunition Plant, won an Army contract Friday to maintain the plant and subcontract it for use.

The company also received an Army contract for $1.1 million to produce 50,000 new aluminum bases for old 155mm shells like the ones the plant once produced.

The contract is expected to be signed in the near future. Up to 50 people may be employed for about three to four months, according to MTI acting general manager Ray Scott.

The plant operated approximately 10 years, until 1988, and employed some 1,700 employees at its peak.

Hours will be from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Bay-Waveland Yacht Club, North Beach Boulevard, Bay St. Louis.

Takeouts will be available and tickets will be sold at the door.

I need not tell you red beans and rice have been a staple food in Hancock County for as long as I can remember and many years before that.

Last year there were nine restaurants participating in the cookoff, and this year the number has increased to over two dozen.

The competition for the best cook or cooks, has naturally gotten out of hand, and a lot of bragging, among other things, is going on.

One participant even has his own publicity agent, another group is offering 'bribes.' I even heard one say his team was counting the beans, and some are so very confident that they will win, they are already calling themselves the "Top Bean."

The Cancer Society has a lot of folks cooking beans and rice, and all they need now is a large number of folks to join them on Monday, that is tomorrow, for lunch at the Yacht Club.

I will be there to get my fill and vote for the cooks who I think have done the best job.

By the way, the only ingredients being offered by the cooks are red beans and rice. Many report they have 'secret' herbs, spices, seasonings and cooking temperatures.

I hope to see you Monday at the "Cookoff." By the way, my favorite selection as the "Top Bean" goes to, let me see, ah! I forgot the name.

FROM THE SENATE

By Senator Trent Lott

Crime, out of control

We had a terrible tragedy in Washington recently when House of Representative's Sergeant At Arms, Mississippi Jack Russ, originally from Picayune, was mugged and shot.

Jack works with the Capitol Hill Police, and in effect is the boss of the House CHPD. He also works with members of the House and Senate and their families to tell us how to deal with crime. Well, the other evening he was walking his dog on Capitol Hill when he was held up, robbed and then shot in the mouth for no reason. He didn't resist. He turned over his watch and wallet, and then the robbers put a gun in his mouth and pulled the trigger.

Fortunately, Jack had the presence of mind to jerk his head at the last second and, in so doing, saved his life as the bullet passed through his cheek without hitting any vital areas.

Jack is at home and recovering fine, but this heinous crime points out once again that crime, drug abuse and the relation between the two are absolutely out of control in Washington, and frankly, in Mississippi and all across this country. We have got to get control of our city streets and keep our people safe wherever they live.

In order to do this, one of the things I called for last week was the passage of a crime bill. The Congress has messed around on this issue for a year and still has not passed a bill.

The one we have pending is very weak, and in fact, if passed, would protect criminals even more instead of set stronger laws to punish them.

We need a bill which does the following: limits the number of appeals; allows police who get evidence in good faith to use that evidence; enforces the death penalty for at least 50 crimes that now are not punishable by death; limits the ridiculous use of habeas corpus; and, in conclusion, is a tough crime bill. And, we need it now.

In Mississippi, some positive steps are being taken now to fight crime and drugs including two programs at the Mississippi Department of Public Safety.

The first uses $4.7 million on state and local levels to fight crime and drugs by giving our trench-fighting law enforcement men and women support. This money will help police departments, and all levels of justice, to work jointly with one another and use cooperation and the most innovative and modern programs and equipment available to wage war on crime.

Also, the Department of Public Safety will use more than $135,046 for a second effort, a three-year program which will improve Mississippi's criminal history records. With improved records, law enforcement officials can more rapidly locate and identify criminals and use records of arrests, prosecutions, convictions and sentences to more rapidly move criminals through the court system and to where they belong, in jail.

Crime has the American people horrified. They don't understand the horrible crimes or how criminals are protected on the streets and even in prison. The common, hard-working man and woman doesn't want to blame anyone, they just want someone to do something. Folks, it's past time that something be done.

By Rep. Gene Taylor

Mississippi shortchanged on federal education dollars

In a Department of Education report released last year, a major finding revealed that 24 states are being shortchanged on federal education dollars—and Mississippi is one of them.

To reverse this discrimination, I have cosponsored The Educational Equity Act of 1991. The bill would affect the way federal education funds are distributed to states under Chapter 1, Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965.

This bill would increase Mississippi's share of Chapter 1 funds by $20 million, from $95 million to $115 million.

Chapter 1 is a federal education program that provides funding to assist underprivileged children (ages 5-17) and other "educationally disadvantaged" youth.

The reason Mississippi is being shortchanged is that the Chapter 1 formula for federal education funding is tied to the amount each state spends per pupil. As a result, the formula distributes more funds to low income children in states with high personal per-capita income.

Since Mississippi spends the least per pupil, $2,000 compared with the national average of $4,000 per pupil, we get less Chapter 1 funds per pupil than do other states. In effect, this formula is unreasonable because it has granted more funds to serve a poor child in a state which spends more on disadvantaged youth than it does to serve that same child if he or she had attended school in Mississippi.

For example, Connecticut, which has the highest per pupil expenditures, receives 50 percent more per eligible child than Mississippi. In other words, for every dollar provided to serve an eligible child in Mississippi, an eligible child in Connecticut is provided $1.50.

The bill would eliminate per-pupil expenditures from the grant formula, and base each state's allocation solely on the number of children age 5-17 from needy families in the state. Every state would receive the same amount per child.

I believe we must remove the "state-per-pupil expenditure" from the formula and substitute a "national-per-pupil expenditure." This means that once poor children are identified through the population census, Mississippi's disadvantaged youth will be provided the same amount of money per child as other states.

I support this bill 100 percent and am optimistic the House of Representatives will pass this measure before the end of April. Thus, we can send the bill to the Senate for passage and then to the President for his signature. This would reverse Mississippi's yearly shortfall of Chapter 1 federal education dollars by $20 million.

FROM THE MISSISSIPPI SENATE

By Senator Vic Frankiewicz

Tough times ahead as budgets face further cuts

Belt tightening was the theme in the Senate last week. To hold the line on taxes, the Appropriations Committee set out to fit educational funding within existing revenues.

To do this, other agencies must be cut more, and better internal management practices must be implemented.

For the first time in my Senate career, these changes will end up hitting a few agencies previously thought to be politically untouchable. The most controversial of these agencies is the highway department.

We have a great deal to be proud of in our highway department. At the same time, our law sets the department apart; it automatically gets a designated part of our tax collections without comparing highway needs to other critical state programs such as education, health care, and law enforcement.

Further, the highway department will end this fiscal year with a cash balance of about $118 million, while the rest of Mississippi's operations are essentially broke. And the $118 million is what is left over after we've borrowed from the fund to help other agencies!

We should resist the temptation to go on a spending spree with highway funds, but we should look at how efficient our highway department is, and we should examine the balance between highway spending and other state needs.

All of this will help, but I am not sure that we can cut enough without eliminating essential services. Except for highways, Mississippi is at or near the bottom of the 50 states in what we spend on government services.

We must be cautious about making short-sighted decisions to save money now, only to pay for it later.

Cutting back on classroom instruction will merely continue to cycle of ignorance which has held Mississippi back for over a century. Reducing childhood nutrition and health programs will cost much more later in disease and disabilities which could have been prevented.

Because of these choices, we are facing the most challenging time in recent history. The slow economy and lagging tax collections have forced cuts of $75.6 million in the current year's budget in addition to the $105 million cut last year.

The proposed versions of the 1993 budgets are starting out $115 million less than the recommendations of the budget office, and may be cut further.

The debate over the budget and revenues will be extremely volatile in the next couple of weeks.

As we slug through this process, I am interested in your input. You can reach me in Jackson at 359-3454, or by mail at the Mississippi Senate, P.O. Box 1018, Jackson, MS 39215.

FROM THE MISSISSIPPI HOUSE

By Representative J.P. Compretta

Program funding battle continues in House

The emphasis was mostly on state finances again in the House of Representatives in the past week with the Appropriations Committee wrestling over proposed funding for public education, mental health, universities, community colleges, and other vital programs.

Major floor action in the House last week included passage of a proposal to reconstitute the Mississippi Veterans Affairs Board following criticism by veterans' organizations and alleged deficiencies in regard to operation of the State Veterans' Home in Jackson.

Under the measure, the terms of present Board members would be terminated as of July 1 with seven new members to be named by the Governor from a list of nominees prepared by the Mississippi Council of Veterans Organizations.

The amount of bonds that may be issued for the Economic Development Highway Program would be increased from $35 million to $45 million under another major bill passed by the House.

The House also voted to authorize up to $25 million in revenue bonds to help fund regional solid waste disposal facilities; allocate an additional $30 million in state funds for Medicaid in the current fiscal year; revise hearing procedures in Public Service Commission cases and provide for notice to customers when a utility company files for a rate hike.

Let regional airport authorities exempt certain lessees from ad valorem taxes; permit certain logging equipment which is not self-propelled to be taxed at the same 3 percent rate as self-propelled equipment; and set a penalty for failing to meet time restraints in registering marine dredging equipment for ad valorem tax purposes.

Among bills winning final approval was a measure to let people in certain counties decide this fall if they wish to stay under a county-unit system of road management or vote to return to some form of beat system. An old law would not allow a vote until 1995 on coming out from under a county-unit plan. The measure, passed by the House in February, cleared the Senate last week and now goes to the Governor.

The Appropriations Committee agreed last week to recommend a General Fund allocation totaling more than $905 million over scaled-down recommendations prepared by the Joint Legislative Budget Committee.

The proposals, including $302.8 million for the Minimum Foundation Education Program, were designed to meet basic classroom needs in grades K-12 this fall and avoid teacher layoffs. However, the plan involved reduced expenditures for school buses and textbooks, and calls for cutting back several non-education budgets. The committee later agreed to restore some of these budgets—including mental health and human services—to prior levels by using transfer funds from various sources and reducing a deficit allocation for public education from a proposed $10 million to $7.5 million for the present fiscal year.

Exchange Club promotes Child Abuse Prevention Month

The Exchange Club of Hancock County will join some 1,200 Exchange Clubs across the country during April to mark the annual observance of National Child Abuse Prevention Month. The local club will place inserts into report cards for school children, participate in a Child Abuse Prevention Awareness Day April 4 at Edgewater Mall, and distribute posters along with blue ribbons which signify Child Abuse Prevention Month.

"We have also contacted the mayors of Bay St. Louis and Waveland, and both have agreed to write a proclamation for Child Abuse Prevention Month," said Exchange Club president Julie Cannon.

Exchange adopted child abuse prevention as a national project in 1979, and is working to address the problem through the public awareness efforts of local clubs as well as a network of more than 60 Child Abuse Prevention Centers in 30 states and in Puerto Rico.

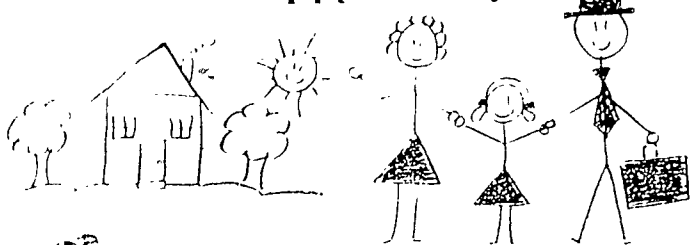

A Child Abuse Prevention

Center in Gulfport services Hancock, Harrison and Jackson counties.

The centers train volunteer parent aides who work directly with families where abuse has occurred. These volunteers serve as role models and teach positive parenting techniques. To date, these centers have eliminated child abuse in thousands of families.

The National Exchange Club is an all-volunteer, national service organization for men and women who want to better their community, develop leadership skills, and enjoy new friendships. Exchange is made up of some 40,000 members through the United States and Puerto Rico.

"We are here to offer safety and compassion for women who are ready to leave desperate situations.

"We are here to offer a way out."

The center included a battered women's home, which is in an undisclosed location. It accepts women and their children and offers counseling services, addressing psychological, emotional, legal and financial needs.

Theriot stated most women come to the center with no money. "The first thing we do is get them financial assistance, which takes less time than you think."

"We help them find a job, and if legal services are required, we have a number to call. The center has an excellent working relationship with the district attorney's office."

Theriot, a volunteer with the center for the past two years, cites the heartaches as well as the triumphs of some 30 women she has personally assisted.

"Of course," she comments, "the ones who return to abusive situations make you feel discouraged. All you can do is hope they will eventually gain the courage to break the cycle."

"But then there are the ones who succeed. To see a woman come for help, and in such a short time, start a new life, a new job and to know you were able to help, is most encouraging."

Suzanne Cooper, community liaison for the center, expressed an urgent need for more women to come forward and volunteer their assistance.

"It is not easy," Cooper stated. "We are really asking quite a lot of a volunteer when we say you must be a person who can be non-judgmental."

She said, the main function of the volunteer is to act in a support role, offering compassion to the victim.

For one week a month, between the hours of 5 p.m. and 6 a.m., the crisis line phone number will be routed to the volunteer's home.

In cases of rape, either the hospital or the local law enforcement office will call and ask that the crisis volunteer be with the victim for the next few hours of medical care.

Theriot said, never can the volunteer go to the caller's home; instead she must encourage the victim to leave the place of abuse and make her way to the center or to a public area, where someone can meet her to assist.

The Gulf Coast Crisis Center is presently taking applications for volunteers as they prepare to begin two training sessions. Each session consists of two full days of training. The two sessions will be April 4-5 and April 25-26.

The center assists an average of 300 local women a year. To become a part of the volunteer program, call Augusta Toomer at 435-1968, or 1-800-800-1396.

Elks plan organizational meeting

Special to the Echo

A group of local men are organizing an Elks Lodge for the Bay St. Louis/Pass Christian area. They have been holding weekly meetings with members of the Gulfport, Biloxi and Ocean Springs Lodges, along with former Elks from other areas who have moved into this area.

"The Order of Elks was formally organized Feb. 16, 1868 in New York City and has grown to a membership of about 1,400,000 American citizens from every prominent city of the country, who are respected gentlemen in their communities and are proud to say that they belong to the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks," said spokesman Conrad Mauffray.

The Order of Elks is a fraternal organization. Its declared purposes are to practice its four cardinal virtues: charity, justice, brotherly love and fidelity; to promote the welfare and enhance the happiness of its members; to quicken the spirit of American patriotism; and to cultivate good fellowship.

The Elks champion many charitable causes, with each Lodge choosing its own area of interest to support. Some little known facts are the Elks built and gave to the U.S. Government the first two V.A. hospitals, and they are second only to the U.S. Government in providing college scholarships and grants for higher education.

The local group is planning a family-style "get acquainted" picnic for Sunday, April 5 at 11 a.m. For more information, contact Conrad Mauffray daily at 467-6535, evenings at 467-4680, or Carlos Arnold evenings at 467-0941 or Gene Woodrick daily at 466-3929, evenings at 452-3037.

GOD'S LOVE APPEARS IN THE LOVELY PASTELS OF SPRING

When winter snows have joined the past,
With skies no longer overcast,
The sun will shine and soon, at last,
A new day it will bring:
Announced by every balmy breeze,
While barren branches by degrees
Will turn to green upon the trees,
Where birds begin to sing,
The butterflies are everywhere,
And flowers' perfume fills the air;
Their pastel beauty meant to share
With every living thing.
Your faith will help you understand
The love of God, when He has planned
That everything upon the land
Will come to life in spring.

County to add jail wing

BY TRACI BONNEY

A $225,000 addition to the Hancock County jail is expected to pay for itself in less than a year from its completion date, according to Sheriff Ronnie Peterson.

Peterson and architect Fred Wagner presented completed plans for the addition to the supervisors Tuesday. The plans, authorized 11 months ago, were completed last year, but by the time they were ready the supervisors were unable to solicit bids for the work because their terms were almost over.

Wagner said construction should take about a year after the contract is let. He estimated the cost will be between $225,000 and $250,000.

Peterson guessed the addition, which will house at least 25 Immigration and Naturalization Service inmates, will pay

Peterson and Wagner told the supervisors that the time has come to advertise for construction bids. Alton "Dolph" Kellar moved that the advertising be published, and his motion was unanimously approved.

Before the vote, chancery clerk Mike Nossica pointed out and Rosary Fricke, second from left, in recognition of Child Abuse Prevention Month. Also present are Gail Mitchell and Crystal Page. For more information, call Bridget Logan at 467-9051.

Health Well Baby, Child Care

BY TRACI BONNEY

Most parents want to give their babies the best of everything. Often, though, high costs limit the fulfillment of those wishes.

For instance, many parents are not able to afford regular medical checkups for their children. For those parents, there is help.

The Mississippi State Department of Health offers Well Baby care to babies from birth to two years of age, and annual child health care for children up to seven years old.

Judy Yarborough with the county Health Department said the program is especially targeted toward high-risk infants and those who do not have a private doctor for routine child care.

"Well Baby Clinic is a special clinic to help keep your baby healthy and happy," she stated. "A nurse will give your baby a complete examination, review and advise you about the child's feeding, elimination, development, behavior and immunizations. She will also answer any questions you may have regarding the care of your baby."

"Developmental appraisal is a vital component of child assessment. Without the use of formal developmental screening tools, children with developmental disabilities can remain unidentified.

"However, if through screening problems are identified early in the developmental process, treatment is more likely to be successful."

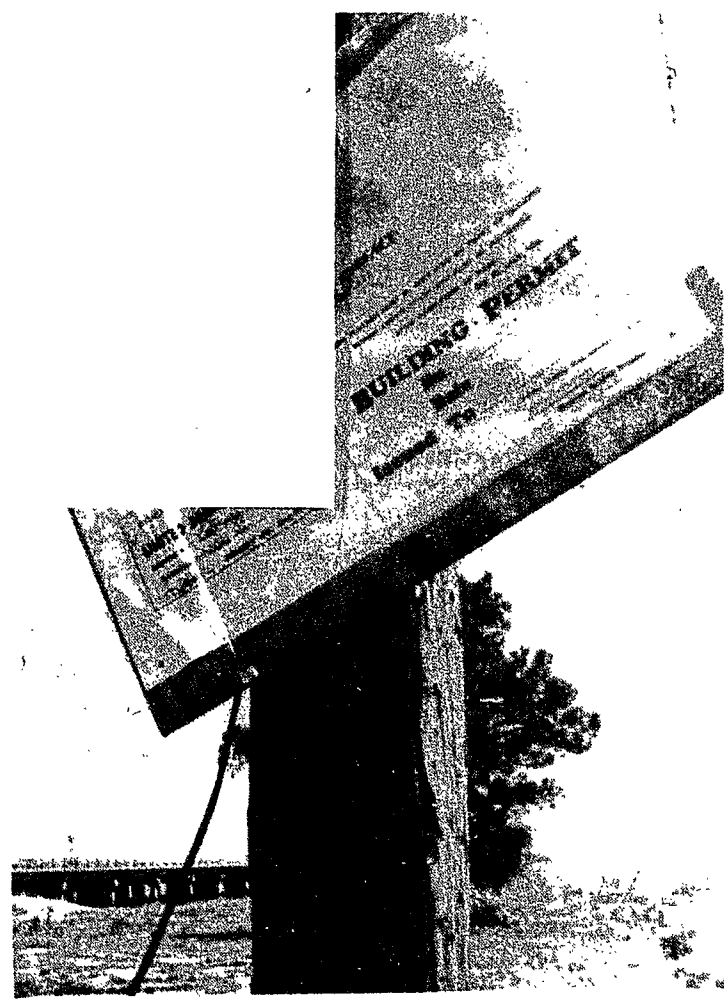

If the baby is well, he or she will receive immunizations as the proper ages to keep the shots up to date.

"Your baby should receive

These authentic-looking permits appeared yesterday on the Pete Fountain property where Mardi Gras Casino proposes to develop a dockside gambling resort. However, Bay St. Louis administrative assistant Mike Cuevas disputed their validity. "Bay St. Louis has not issued any building permit, any permit of any sort for that property," she stated. "Nothing official has come from City Hall on that, trust me." (Photo by T.H. (Doc) Toups)
